Practice Areas

Complex Business Litigation | Construction Litigation

Anthony Salaber is a passionate civil litigator who has extensive experience in the construction management industry.

Before attending law school, Anthony gained construction industry experience working as a construction inspector and in helping to prepare bid proposals for various public works projects. This distinct experience provides Anthony with an ability to understand the driving motivations of the entities involved in the construction industry and how to come to a successful resolution in a high-stress environment. Additionally, this experience allows him to quickly identify and understand a client's needs, no matter the client's company size. Anthony is adept at all challenges involving the construction life cycle, from bid proposals to prompt payment disputes and more.
